Poster Crack + Activator

Description: Deckdeck2 is a multiplayer card-based browser-based trading card game that has been around for some time now. It's been out for a while but I've only recently started playing it. You can think of it as a more casual form of Magic: The Gathering. You have a set of cards that you can add to a hand and these cards have a certain power and can be used to perform various actions. You can also have other players that can use their cards to attack you or defend against your attacks. The game features a fairly simple interface that lets you search for a card, play a game against a computer or another human player, and also give cards to other players in order to trade with them. You also have a deck building feature where you create your own card collection and can then add those to your deck. Pros: - Simple and straight forward interface - Allows you to easily add your own cards to your collection - Allows you to easily build your own deck - Allows you to play against a computer opponent, human players, or any combination of the two - Beautiful card art (and customizable options) - Great game mechanics that are easy to understand - Very addictive - High replayability factor Cons: - The game is free to play but micro-transactions are required for card creation (just under $2 a card) - The game can be a little bit demanding and fairly slow - The game is not mobile friendly (some cards require a mobile device) What I think: I think the game has a fairly unique set of mechanics and card based gameplay, which keeps things interesting. I think there are some other card games that have a similar gameplay mechanic, but Deckdeck2 definitely has its own feel. I think the game is not very polished right now but it has a very friendly and familiar UI, which keeps you coming back for more. I think Deckdeck2 has potential to be a very popular game. What you should know before you play: - The interface and game mechanics are pretty straightforward - You have a small window to create your deck, so keep that in mind - The game is not mobile friendly - The cards are pretty expensive (about $2 a card) - Most players are in the United States - Deckbuilding mode is not supported (yet) - Players will receive an e-mail with a survey and may be contacted via e-mail
